Modern country Autumn Winter 2015

Rustic living and dining is a dream of many, but is sometimes seen as out of reach for those unable to up sticks and relocate to a secluded farmhouse setting. Rebecca Snowden, Interior Style Advisor at online retailer Furniture Choice, provides her top tips for creating a farmhouse dining room to rival even the most rural of homes.

"The best part about the modern country style is that the final result has a lived-in, versatile quality. One could choose to lean in to the traditional farmhouse aesthetic, or channel more of the metropolitan lifestyle for a home customised around personal preferences."

"Oak lends a traditional, rustic touch to even the most modern homes. Our Kensington table is an elegant design that can be styled up or down while also extending out for extra seats. Enhance it further with a set of classic chairs - for instance the Kendal with its cross back detailing - for a strong, farmhouse-inspired space."
