Sunny days Spring Summer

Have a fresh interior start this spring by introducing yellow into the home. Rebecca Snowden, Interior Style Advisor at Furniture Choice, shares 4 ways to decorate the home with yellow for the sunny season.

Begin with pops of yellow in a home office as the happy hue helps boost creativity and positivity. Brighter options like canary or daffodil yellow lighten the look while imbuing energy and freshness into the work setting. "As far as an accent colour goes, yellow is a vivid choice that isn't too daring or distracting," she says. "Layer different tones of yellow for depth and to create a curated look."

In the bedroom, draw inspiration from the outdoors by complementing a neutral setting with pops of mustard yellow. "The contemporary shade stands out against colours like white, soft grey, and oak while drawing out their warm undertones. Its earthy characteristic evokes warmth to create a cosy feel in the bedroom, while its vibrancy demonstrates the home owner's confidence in styling their space with a bold colour," says Rebecca.

As for dining room walls, a bright butter yellow goes well with Classic Blue, the 2020 Pantone colour of the year, to transform it into an inviting space. "Employ colour blocking techniques on opposing walls and entrance features for a modern twist. The bold contrast is playful and welcoming - helpful for inducing casual conversations and great for a family-friendly setting," advises Rebecca.

An energetic hue like pineapple yellow is good for a kid's bedroom as it sets a fun and educational tone. The gender neutral colour fosters enthusiasm and positivity while adding cosiness through texturally rich accessories like a linen throw and cotton pillows. "White wooden furniture is brilliantly versatile. They can be modern or contemporary yet still work in a traditional setting and have the effect of warming up a space," Rebecca says. "Spring is a good time to experiment with yellow in the home; to provide comfort and cosiness in the last few chilly days while being perfectly in line for a brighter backdrop come summer."
